

Architectural History

Convener: Dr Philip Goad (Architecture, Building and Planning)

Architectural history is taught within the Faculty of Architecture, Building and Planning, and in the Faculty of Arts. It deals with aspects of the history, interpretation, representation, cultural context, design, planning, construction and conservation of buildings, viewed in a perspective of social history and cultural milieu. Specific subject areas include the wide range of European architecture, architecture of the 19th and 20th centuries, Greek and Roman architecture, Asian architecture, and Australian architecture.

Faculty of Arts requirements

Students undertaking the Bachelor of Arts are permitted to enrol in a range of subjects offered by other faculties, but must complete a minimum of 50 points of first-year subjects in areas of study approved by the Faculty of Arts. Within the architectural history program, only those subjects taught by departments of the Faculty of Arts are arts-approved subjects. See Arts-approved subject requirement (p.4) for more information.

BA combined course students are not permitted to enrol in these subjects for credit towards the arts component of the combined degree. Please consult a Faculty of Arts course adviser for more information.

Further studies

A BA with a major in architectural history can lead to the Postgraduate Diploma in Planning and Design (Architectural History and Conservation), or the Postgraduate Diploma and Masters of Art Curatorship.

An honours degree in architectural history can lead to a Master of Planning and Design (Architectural History and Conservation) by coursework or research, or to the Master of Arts by research. PhD Study is also available in the contributing departments.

Career opportunities

The postgraduate study outlined above is most often directed towards professional specialisation in the building conservation field. Graduates and postgraduates in this field constitute a large proportion of the professionals now working for private consultants and government in Victoria in the areas of survey and identification, design and conservation controls, historical research, and the physical conservation of buildings.
