

Chinese Language and Studies

The study of Chinese language and culture is highly advantageous for students interested in banking, trade, financial, diplomatic services and a range of other professional careers in the internationalised world. Chinese language classes cater for a range of competencies, from students who have little or no knowledge of Chinese to advanced-level speakers. These targeted levels of language proficiency provide students with the means for a contextualised approach to Chinese language, society and culture, and increasingly, Chinese science and technology.

Chinese studies addresses modern and pre-modern aspects of Chinese culture and society, including language, literature, film, philosophy and religion. Cultural and linguistic knowledge provides a foundation for the exploration of contemporary Chinese social organisation and strategies for research and development, business, trade and international relations in evolving global communities. Chinese studies is one of a number of programs that constitute the Asia Institute. The Institute was established in 1998 as a major teaching and research initiative of the University of Melbourne. The Asia Institute serves to strengthen the University's role as a major international centre for the development of studies in Asian languages and societies. Students who specialise in Chinese studies develop transferable skills that will enhance their career options. Alternatively, they are able to expand on their interest and knowledge through an articulated structure of higher degree study options at the University of Melbourne.

Time commitment to study

As well as scheduled contact hours for lectures, tutorial and seminars a considerable additional time commitment is needed to complete the academic requirements of each subject.

A subject-specific time commitment to study will be provided by your lecturer or tutor at the beginning of semester to help you schedule your workload and successfully manage your time during the semester. In addition, general estimates of the total time commitment required to study a 12.5-point single semester subject in the Faculty of Arts can be found on page 1.

Language study streams

Chinese Language Program Coordinator: Ms Diane Manwaring

The Asia Institute offers three streams of Chinese language study:

Beginners

The beginners stream is for students who have little or no knowledge of Chinese. It is available to students at both first and second year, although students intending to complete a major will need to commence their language study in their first year.

Post-VCE

The post-VCE stream is usually only available to students with no background in Chinese who have obtained a pass in VCE Chinese or its equivalent.

Students with a Chinese-speaking background

Four different levels are available to students who are from a Chinese-speaking background:

- no knowledge of written Chinese
- knowledge of written Chinese limited to approximately 500 characters
- pass in VCE Chinese or equivalent
- substantial education in a Chinese environment.

Placement in one of these levels depends on a number of factors, such as spoken competence in Mandarin or a Chinese dialect and ability to read and write Chinese characters.

The Institute determines the language stream in which a student is to enrol. For all students the subject(s) they enrol in will be determined by the Institute after an interview. Placement is based on the interview, VCE results, other language study record and, if necessary, a placement test. Interviews and placement tests will be held in the week preceding the first week of semester. No student may attend class without first attending an interview and/or placement test.

Stream enrolment remains provisional until confirmed or, alternatively, altered according to the student's needs as determined by the Institute. As far as possible, the Institute will notify students of any changes to their stream enrolment during the first two weeks of semester. Where a change is made in the third or fourth week of semester it will be reported to the Associate Dean (Academic Programs).

Students of other faculties may enrol in Chinese in any year of their course with the approval of their faculty and the Faculty of Arts.

Diploma in Modern Languages (Chinese)

The Diploma in Modern Languages (DML) enables students to gain a diploma in language study while completing an undergraduate degree at the University of Melbourne.

The DML involves a three-year sequence of language study, totalling a minimum of 100 points. It adds one year to the duration of an ordinary degree course.

The DML (Chinese) is offered in the beginners, post-VCE, and Chinese background streams. Chinese subjects are taken alongside degree subjects in an integrated sequence of study. This must be approved by the home faculty course adviser. All students are required to attend an interview and/or placement test to determine subject enrolment (see above).

Students wishing to undertake Chinese language study as part of an exchange program may credit their studies towards the DML. However, such students should contact the Chinese Language Program Coordinator in their first year of study to ensure that their study plan can accommodate exchange study in their DML.

Requirements for majors in ChineseA major in Chinese language

A major in Chinese language usually consists of 112.5 points comprising:

- first-year subjects in Chinese language/studies (25-37.5 points); and
- second-year subjects in Chinese language/studies (25-37.5 points); and
- third-year subjects in Chinese language/studies (37.5-50 points).

Students intending to major in Chinese language are advised to complement their language studies with subjects in Chinese literature, culture and society.

A major in Chinese studies

Chinese studies coordinator: Professor David Holm

A major in Chinese studies usually consists of eight 12.5-point subjects, totaling 100 points. It comprises:

- two first-year subjects in Chinese studies (25 points); and
- six second/third-year subjects in Chinese studies (75 points).

Structuring a major in Chinese language

A major in Chinese language usually takes one of the following forms:

Structuring a major in Chinese studies

Subjects undertaken towards the major in Chinese studies would normally be taken primarily from the list below. In addition, students are encouraged to take subjects with substantial China-related content from other programs. These may be taken as part of the Chinese studies major with the approval of the Head of the Chinese Program and the Associate Dean (Academic Programs).

Honours entry

Asia Institute honours coordinator: Dr Carolyn Stevens

The prerequisites for entry to fourth-year honours in Chinese language are:

- completion of all the requirements for the BA;
- completion of a major in Chinese;
- an average grade of H2A or higher over the second/third-year subjects within the major;
- completion of at least one Chinese studies subject at second/third-year level, either as part of a major in Chinese or outside it, with a grade of H2A or higher.

Students intending to study Chinese at Honours level are strongly encouraged to complement their study of the Chinese language either by completing a major in Chinese studies or by taking some subjects on Chinese culture and society, either in this Institute or in history, politics, or fine arts.

For information on how to apply see Applying for Honours (p.13).

Honours requirements

Pure honours

Students undertaking pure honours in Chinese must complete:

- 110-533 Chinese Thesis (p.11) (37.5 points); and
- 110-590 Critical Asian Perspectives (p.3) (12.5 points); and
- four honours subjects in Chinese (50 points).

Combined honours

Students undertaking combined honours in Chinese and another discipline must complete:

- 110-533 Chinese Thesis (p.11) (37.5 points); and
- 110-590 Critical Asian Perspectives (p.3) (12.5 points); and
- one honours subject in Chinese (12.5 points); and
- three honours subjects in the combining discipline (37.5 points).

or

- honours thesis in the combining discipline (37.5 points); and
- two honours subjects in the combining discipline (25 points); and
- 110-590 Critical Asian Perspectives (p.3) (12.5 points); and

- two honours subjects in Chinese (25 points).

Studying overseas

Suitably qualified students studying Chinese in the Institute may undertake language study overseas for credit towards their degree. An application for credit must be lodged with the Institute prior to proceeding overseas. Opportunities for in-country study are provided by 110-213 Chinese in China (p.8), 110-226 Intensive Chinese Program: China (p.9) or through the University of Melbourne's student exchange program. Interested students should consult the Faculty of Arts Student Support Centre for approval to receive credit for such studies. See Studying overseas for credit (p.4).

Career opportunities

The importance of Chinese to Australia is growing both because of Australia's expanding links with China and other nations in the region, and because of the increasing size of the Chinese-speaking community within Australia. High rates of economic growth in China and elsewhere in East Asia make Chinese a good long-term option. Graduates of the Bachelor of Arts who have majored in Chinese have found employment in banking and the financial sector, in the diplomatic service and in other government departments, in private industry and commerce, and in secondary and tertiary teaching. Students studying for a professional degree such as law, commerce or engineering are also likely to find career prospects enhanced by combining their studies with Chinese.

Prerequisites: 110-029 Introductory Chinese 2B (p.5) or equivalent as determined by the coordinator.

Contact: A 2-hour lecture and a 2-hour tutorial per week (Semester 1).

Description: This subject offers an introduction to literary Chinese (wenyan) which was the formal written language of imperial China and the foundation of modern written Chinese. A knowledge of literary Chinese is thus indispensable in attaining higher level literacy in Chinese. Literary Chinese also includes texts written in classical Chinese in antiquity. In this subject students will read selections of Chinese literature from antiquity to the Tang period. Students will develop skills in reading texts written in full-form characters and acquire a basic knowledge of the particles and syntax of literary Chinese. They will also explore the origin and meaning of Chinese proverbs and the function of wenyan in contemporary usage.

Assessment: A class presentation and paper of 1500 words 20% (during semester, the paper is due one week after the presentation), a 1-hour review test in class equivalent to 500 words 20% (due in week 6) and a 2-hour examination 60% (during the examination period).

Contact: Twenty classroom hours per week (5 hours per day) (Semester 1).

Description: This is an in-country language subject, to be held at a university in China in Semester 1. The subject provides an in-country alternative to third-year language study in Chinese for well-qualified students. Both in terms of total contact hours and language learning, this subject is the equivalent of a full year on campus at Melbourne, and a pass in this subject will qualify students for entry to appropriate fourth-year language subjects. Subject components will cover all aspects of third-year language work, including listening comprehension, advanced oral work, composition, and readings in modern and pre-modern Chinese. Assessment will be conducted in part by host university staff (continuous assessment) and by staff of the Chinese program after the students return.

Assessment: Assessment conducted at the host university in China: assignments and/or tests and class participation, totalling 5000 words, 50%. Assessment conducted at the University of Melbourne (in the week prior to the commencement of the second semester): a 1-hour examination 30%, a 20-minute oral test 10% and a 30-minute listening comprehension test 10%.

Prescribed texts: As determined by the host university.

Prerequisites: 12.5 points of second/third year Chinese studies, Asian studies or other essay based arts subject for third year. Admission to a postgraduate diploma or fourth year honours in Chinese studies, Asian studies or permission of the subject coordinator.

Contact: A 2.5-hour seminar per week (Semester 2).

Description: This subject explores the diversity of regional cultures in China. It looks at the distinctive social structures, belief systems, rituals, customs as well as the linguistic, artistic and literary systems found in various regions of what is now China. It combines the study of existing academic scholarship on Chinese local cultures with original research, examining different conceptual approaches to the question of regional cultural identity. On completion of this subject students should have developed an understanding of major issues in the analysis of Chinese regional culture, as well as skills of independent research and analysis.

Assessment: A reflective essay of 2000 words 40% (due mid-semester), a research essay of 2000 words for 3rd year and 3000 words for 4th year 50% (due during the examination period) and a class presentation 10%.

Coordinator: Dr Carolyn Stevens & Prof David Holm

Prerequisites: Admission to the postgraduate diploma or fourth-year honours in Chinese.

Contact: Regular meetings with the supervisor over two consecutive semesters of enrolment (Semester 1, repeat 2).

Description: Students will be required to write a thesis of 12 000 words. They will also be required to present a seminar paper on the results of their research in their second semester.

Assessment: A 12 000 word thesis 100% (due during the second semester of enrolment).

110-408 Chinese Translation Project

Availability: 4th year

Credit points: 12.5

Coordinator: Prof David Holm

Prerequisites: Admission to the postgraduate diploma or fourth-year honours in Chinese. Prospective students must contact the subject coordinator.

Contact: A 2-hour seminar per week (Semester 2).

Description: This subject involves an independent translation of a Chinese text equivalent to approximately 5000 words in English translation. Students will be asked to submit an English translation of a Chinese text, chosen by the student and approved by the supervisor, by the end of first semester. By the end of the subject students should have become familiar with the techniques and standards of literary translation, and be able to incorporate them into their theses.

Assessment: A translation project of 5000 words 100% (due at the end of semester).

110-430 Advanced Chinese Translation

Availability: 4th year

Credit points: 12.5

Coordinator: Prof David Holm

Prerequisites: Admission to the postgraduate diploma or fourth-year honours in Chinese.

Contact: A 2-hour seminar per week (Semester 1).

Description: In this subject students will learn to translate from Chinese to English. The selection of texts will be limited to modern literature and to documents and news items on politics and international affairs because students can be expected to have gained previous experience in the reading and translating of material of these two genres. In their translations students will learn to focus on accuracy as well as stylistic appropriateness and will be encouraged to submit both individual and group work.

Assessment: Class work totalling 1000 words 20% (due weekly in class), four written translations totalling 2000 words 40% (due at intervals during semester) and a 2-hour examination 40% (due during the examination period).

Prescribed texts: Materials supplied by the Institute.

110-464 Sino-Tibetan Linguistics

Note: Formerly available as 110-154. Students who have completed 110-154 are not eligible to enrol in this subject.

Availability: 4th year

Credit points: 12.5

Coordinator: Dr Luo Yongxian

Prerequisites: Admission to the postgraduate diploma or fourth-year honours in Chinese.

Contact: A 2-hour seminar per week (Semester 2).

Description: The Sino-Tibetan language family comprises several hundred languages with enormous diversity, complexity and time-depth. The genetic relationship between Chinese and Tibetan can be established, using the comparative method in historical linguistics. How these languages were formed and how they interacted with each other over time is crucial to our understanding of the early history and culture of this region. This subject will discuss these issues by guiding the students to seek answers from the available evidence.

Assessment: Four short written assignments, worth 40% (10% each), commencing in week 3 and due at the end of the teaching period. A term project of 3,000-3,500 words, worth 60%, due during the examination period.

Prescribed texts: Material supplied by the Institute.

110-462 Scientific and Technical Chinese

Note: Formerly available as 110-063. Students who have completed 110-063 are not eligible to enrol in this subject.

Availability: 3rd and 4th year

Credit points: 12.5

Coordinator: Dr Luo Yongxian

Prerequisites: 110-163 Introductory Chinese 3B (p.6) or 110-040 Chinese 2B (p.6) or 110-042 Standard Chinese 3B (p.7) or equivalent as determined by the coordinator or admission to the postgraduate diploma or fourth-year honours in Chinese.

Contact: A 2-hour seminar per week (Semester 2).

Description: This subject involves readings in modern scientific and technical Chinese. Students will be introduced to texts from a variety of different disciplines and technical fields, and undertake an independent reading project concentrating on a field of special interest. Reading strategies, technical reference works, and the use of word banks will be explored. Students who complete this subject should gain familiarity with the stylistic and linguistic features of academic and technical Chinese; ability to translate and comment on the selections studied; some facility in reading and translating unseen passages; familiarity with a range of reference tools; and the ability to undertake an independent project in a field of their choice.

Assessment: Four fortnightly exercises, worth 40% (10% each), due at the end of semester; a final essay, totalling 2500 words for 3rd year and 3500 words for 4th year, due during the examination period.

Prescribed texts: Materials will be provided by the Institute at the beginning of semester
