The Republic of Learning:

Why backing universities is the vital challenge of the next 20 years

In 2010, The University of Melbourne's Vice-Chancellor, Professor Glyn Davis, was asked to present the ABC Radio National's Boyer Lecture Series, which for the first time in 51 years was devoted to the theme of Higher Education in Australia.

We warmly welcome you to join alumni of the University of Melbourne as Glyn explores what makes the university sector, with its day-to-day work of teaching, learning and research, one of the most vital assets of the Australian Commonwealth, as the nation tries to navigate an uncertain future.

There will be an opportunity to ask questions and refreshments will also be provided.
